

The many voices of American women

BELOVED

By Toni Morrison. Winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction. A "triumph. Through the different voices and memories of the book...we experience American slavery as it was lived by those who were the object of its exchange."—Margaret Atwood, N. Y. Times Book Review. Even in post-Civil War Ohio the past continued to haunt the ex-slave Sethe and the surviving members of her family in this majestic, magical masterpiece.

O PIONEERS!

By Willa Cather. Introduction by Elizabeth Janeway. In this great classic of American literature, Cather established her unique voice and created the first of many memorable, strong heroines in Alexandra Bergson, an independent Swedish woman and a pioneer in many ways, whose life on the Nebraska prairie is at once lonely, moving, and tragic.

THE PRODIGAL WOMEN

By Nancy Hale. Introduction by Mary Lee Settle. The New Yorker praised The Prodigal Women as "a novel full of stature, skillfully projected...beautifully written." Four decades later Hale's vivid story of Leda March, a Boston Brahmin who had everything, and Betsy and Maizie Jekyll, two beautiful and cunning Southern belles, remains fresh and vibrant for a new generation.

PINK AND WHITE TYRANNY A Society Novel

By Harriet Beecher Stowe. Introduction by Judith Martin. Written in 1871, this astute novel of manners is a penetrating look at the institution of marriage. Stowe transcends the obvious to reveal how Lillie Ellis, a professional belle and undeniable manipulator, is herself a victim of her femininity.

ANGEL ISLAND

By Inez Haynes Gillmore. Introduction by Ursula K. Le Guin. In this undiscovered classic, first published in 1914, five shipwrecked men are suddenly confronted by the sight of five flying women. The men try to tame these elusive, magical bird-creatures and clip their wings, but soon the women are flying again, and a greater wonder comes when a male child is born with wings of his own.

The World They Made Together Black and White Values in Eighteenth-Century Virginia Mechal Sobel

This book takes a remarkable new view of the slave society of the South. Mechal Sobel shows that intensive interaction between blacks and whites had a two-way influence. Whereas previous historians have emphasized the effects of Anglo-American influence on the Afro-American subculture, Sobel contends that the culture of the English in America was in turn deeply affected by African values and perceptions.

"This work is breathtakingly bold in its central thesis. Sobel goes farther than anyone to date in establishing how thoroughly whites and blacks intermixed within the system of slavery and how extensive was the resulting cultural symbiosis. It is truly stunning to come on a book that is so innovative."

—Gary B. Nash, University of California at Los Angeles

Cloth: $25.00 ISBN 0-691-04747-2

Cape Cod Edited by Joseph J. Moldenhauer

Thoreau's compelling account of Cape Cod is here presented in a definitive text. To produce this critical text, the editor has studied all of the surviving drafts, relevant printings, applicable biographical and historical data, and Thoreau's extensive and often obscure published sources. The text is followed by historical and textual essays, notes on problematical readings, a list of emendations, and other apparatus. The Writings of Henry D. Thoreau • Elizabeth Hall Witherell, Editor

Cloth: $33.50 ISBN 0-691-06532-2

Thoreau's Reading A Study in Intellectual History with Bibliographical Catalogue Robert Sattelmeyer

Thoreau's Reading charts Henry Thoreau's intellectual growth and its relation to his literary career from 1833, when he entered Harvard College, to his death in 1862. It also furnishes a catalogue of nearly fifteen hundred entries of his reading. The catalogue provides bibliographical data for, and lists all Thoreau's references to, the books and articles that he read.

The introductory essay traces the shifts in his literary career marked in the chronology of his reading. The book reveals a Thoreau who was deeply interested in and conversant with the major intellectual questions of his times and whose stance of withdrawal from his age masked a lively involvement with many of its most perplexing questions.

Cloth: $39.50 ISBN 0-691-06745-7

The Power of Historical Knowledge

Narrating the Past in Hawthorne, James, and Dreiser

Susan L. Mizruchi

In this provocative study, Susan Mizruchi argues that the act of writing history is the key to the political concerns of American novelists. Using nineteenth-century theories of history as well as recent narratological models, she examines reconstructions of the past in The House of the Seven Gables (1851), The Bostonians (1886), The Wings of the Dove (1902), and An American Tragedy (1925).

"Combining bold theory with close reading, Susan Mizruchi establishes a politics of narration in the American novel. She brings new understanding to the way fiction is implicated in, and self-revealing about, the ideological conflicts of its time. This is a cogent study, sharply argued. . . ."

—Terrence Des Pres, Colgate University

Cloth: $32.50 ISBN 0-691-06725-2

Fictions in Autobiography

Studies in the Art of Self-Invention

Paul John Eakin

"Fictions in Autobiography is a judicious, far-ranging, immensely clarifying discussion of the modern art of self-construction which addresses several issues long perplexing readers and critics. . . . If story-telling is a basic mode of existence as well as a specific literary form, this is best demonstrated in autobiographies, particularly those by Mary McCarthy, Henry James, Jean-Paul Sartre, Vladimir Nabokov, Alfred Kazin, Frank Conroy, Saul Friedlander, and Maxine Hong Kingston. Eakin selects these texts because each is about the making of existential fictions by both actor and author."

Saving America's Wildlife

Thomas R. Dunlap

Illustrating his points by an account of our evolving ideas about wolves and coyotes, Dunlap shows how American attitudes toward nature have been transformed during the last century: once viewed as an adversary to be conquered, nature is now seen as a fragile system of relationships that must be protected from destruction.

"Saving America's Wildlife is a winner—a well-written and important book."

HOMeward BOUND

American Families in the Cold War Era

Elaine Tyler May

Social critic and historian Stuart Ewen vividly depicts the evolution of our increasingly style-conscious society and makes a compelling argument that the "style industry" is no mere decorative device but a vital mechanism for the transmission of social, economic, and political power. He draws on advertising, architecture, fashion, photography, packaging, product design, corporate image, celebrity status, bodily ideals and political propaganda to demonstrate how the images we consume end up consuming us. "Ewen cuts through [the subject of style] ...with consistently sharp arguments."—L.A. TIMES "[Ewen's] perceptions of this stuff that surrounds us like air—in fashion, advertising, even politics—are fresh and provocative."—BOSTON GLOBE "Provocative and exciting....A fine guide through the labyrinth of contemporary culture."—MARSHALL BERMAN, author of All That is Solid Melts into Air "This work can only enhance Ewen's reputation as one of the foremost interpreters of the national cultural landscape....A fascinating book. It tells us more about America than a statistical almanac."—HERBERT I. SCHILLER, UC San Diego illustrated, $19.95

Political tensions abroad, fierce anti-communism at home, and the shadow of the atomic bomb—these factors, Elaine Tyler May argues, fostered a unique form of domesticity in the U.S. Drawing on a rich collection of personal testimonies, Homeward Bound challenges cherished assumptions about the "happy days" of the 1950s and provides new insights into the roots of the social and sexual revolutions that followed. "May sets a new standard for social history by linking intimate family life of the '50s with the larger imperatives of the Cold War....A fascinating look at family life in this unique, even aberrant, decade."—BARBARA EHRENREICH, Harvard University "Provocative, challenging, persuasive."—WILLIAM CHAFE, Duke University "Fascinating...May shows us that the Cold War took place in kitchens, bedrooms, and family rooms, as well as in the Pentagon." —LINDA GORDON, University of Wisconsin, Madison
