

Notes on Contributors

Allan Peskin teaches history at Cleveland State University and is the author of Garfield (1978) and numerous articles on nineteenth-century America. His most recent book is Volunteers, the edited journals of two Mexican War enlisted men.

Arnold G. Tew teaches English at Cleveland State University and is at work on a study of American travelers to the Holy Land in the 1850s.

James H. Dormon is Alumni Distinguished Professor of History and American Studies at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. He is currently at work on a book length manuscript on "Ethnic Semiosis in American Popular Culture, 1820-1910."

Nancy J. Rosenbloom is associate professor of history at Canisius College. Her articles on the politics of film censorship in the progressive era have appeared in Film History and Popular Culture and Political Change in Modern America (1991). She is currently at work on a book-length manuscript on the subject.

Stephen L. Tanner, professor of English at Brigham Young University, is the author of Ken Kesey, Lionel Trilling, and Paul Elmer More: Literary Criticism as the History of Ideas. He has published frequently on the Thurber generation of American writers.

Timothy Miller teaches in the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Kansas. His most recent book is The Hippies and American Values (1991). He is currently working on a survey history of American communes in the twentieth century.

(continued on pg. 138)

(continued from pg. 4)

Daniel F. Littlefield, Jr. is professor of English and director of the American Native Press Archives at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. He is editor of the American Indian material for the historical sections of the Heath Anthology of American Literature. His most recent book is Alex Posey: Creek Poet, Journalist and Humorist.

Steven Watts teaches American cultural and intellectual history at the University of Missouri, Columbia. He is the author of The Republic Reborn (1987) and The Romance of Real Life: Charles Brockden Brown and the Origins of American Culture (forthcoming 1993, Johns Hopkins University Press). He is currently at work on two book-length projects: an analysis of antebellum American liberalism, and a study of Walt Disney and modern American culture.

William Graebner teaches history at the State University of New York, College at Fredonia. His most recent book is The Age of Doubt: American Thought and Culture in the 1940s (1991).

Our THANKS, as always, to those scholars who have recently reviewed manuscripts for us: Winifred Breines, Northeastern University; George Cotkin, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo; Roger Daniels, Universität Innsbruck; Thomas Doherty, Brandeis University; Sam Girgus, Vanderbilt University; Peter Bacon Hales, University of Illinois-Chicago; John Hancock, University of Washington; Andrew Lees, Rutgers University; Richard McKinzie, University of Missouri-Kansas City; Peter Mancall, University of Kansas; Narciso Menocal, University of Wisconsin-Madison; Thomas Pauly, University of Delaware; Leland Person, Southern Illinois University-Carbondale; Larry Rodgers, Kansas State University; Mary Romero, University of Oregon; Eric Sandeen, University of Wyoming; Barry Shank, University of Kansas; James Shortridge, University of Kansas, Geoffrey Steere, University of Kansas; William Tuttle, University of Kansas; James Harvey Young, Emory University.