

Notes on Contributors

Alyson Cole, an assistant professor of Political Science at Queens College of the City University of New York, is currently completing her book, Victim-Claimers & Victim-Blamers: The Politics of Victimhood.

Thomas Hallock, who recently published From the Fallen Tree: Frontier Narratives, Environmental Politics, and the Roots of a National Pastoral, 1749-1826 (University of North Carolina Press), teaches literature at Eckerd College.

Nelson Hathcock is a professor of English at Saint Xavier University in Chicago, where he has taught since 1988.

Melody Herr, an acquisitions editor at Northern Illinois University Press, received the Ph.D. in the history of science, medicine, and technology from Johns Hopkins University, and her research interests focus on the field sciences and exploration.

Cotten Seiler, an assistant professor of American Studies at Dickinson College, is currently exploring the relationship between automobile driving and American subjectivity. He lives in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, with his dog, Merle.