Once again the journal is a bit tardy (although in Wisconsin, as I write this the leaves still haven't shown up, so perhaps a winter issue is in order). Part can be attributed to busy schedules, but frankly it's difficult to put out a journal on time when there are so few submissions. We need your articles, reviews, notes, comments. And not because we the journal staff need them, but because we IALL members need them. Please, examine what it is you're doing and share that with the rest of us.

This issue again contains a mix of new material and reprints. Our thanks go once more to the LLA Journal (Language Lab Association of Japan) for Heidi Byrnes' article. You'll also enjoy Nina Garrett's article based on her keynote address at last summer's IALL meeting. The notes and reviews help round out this issue.

All of us are looking forward to this summer's activities including the IALL leadership meetings in Boulder in June, and the joint meeting with our Japanese colleagues in Nagoya, Japan in August. We hope to see you there!

THE UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS

WELCOMES IALL '93

A visit to the University of Kansas is pleasant any time of year. But its gently rolling hills, abundant flowers, shrubs and manicured lawns make it especially pleasing during the spring and summer months.

The campus is located atop Mount Oread, also called the Hill, a tree-covered overlook studded by limestone buildings with red-tiled roofs. Although the distinctive university skyline can be seen for miles, the University of Kansas is regarded by some as one of the nation's best kept secrets.

The main campus of 26,436 students is located in Lawrence, a growing community that has retained its small-town character. The city offers eclectic boutique shopping in an historic downtown and a variety of restaurants and entertainment.

The Watkins Community Museum is one of 17 city structures on the National Historic Register. A restored 19th Century opera house is another downtown landmark.

Back on the Hill, the Museum of Natural History is ranked as one of the top tourist attractions in the state. KU's Spencer Museum of Art is unsurpassed as a university art museum. It houses a 21,000 piece collection and art library. The university schedules outstanding offerings of music, theatre and dance. In intercollegiate athletics, the Kansas Jayhawks compete in the Big-Eight Conference.

Membership in the prestigious Association of American Universities provides national recognition for the breadth and quality of research and teaching at the University of Kansas. KU is 15th among public universities in number of freshmen National Merit scholars enrolled in fall 1989, the most recent year for which figures are available.

Easily accessible, the campus is only 50 minutes from Kansas City's Mid-Continent International airport. And the amenities of the metropolitan area including jazz, barbecue, shopping, museums, concerts and sporting events are nearby.

Convinced you should see KU? Plan to attend the 1993 meeting of the International Association for Learning Laboratories. Discover the University of Kansas for yourself!

From the Editor

(Washington and Lee University) is coordinating the Video Tours '93. We encourage everyone to consider submitting a short tour of their facility for inclusion in this anthology.

The IALL Summer Leadership Conference is scheduled for June 7-10 at the University of Colorado, Boulder (hosted by Marie Sheppard). All council members, as well as interested members, are encouraged to attend. This is the time that IALL typically gets to the "nuts and bolts" of organizational planning. Council members should expect more details and an agenda in the mail by the end of April.

This summarizes some of IALL's major projects, and highlights the active involvement and enthusiasm of our membership. Membership is the key to the "personality" of the organization. IALL has grown through responding to the interests and needs of its membership. Become involved and help us keep growing.
