Editors' Remarks

All of us who have had the privilege of working for and with the Grand Cayman Blue Iguanas as members of the various Team Blue crews and in other roles know that caring for these animals has the capacity to bring out the best in us: Compassion, generosity, and devotion to a cause greater than ourselves. The individuals that were murdered were beloved by people around the world. They each had their own histories, habits, and endearing quirks. Sara, Jessica, Eldemire, Yellow, Digger, Pedro, and Matthias had learned to trust their caretakers and were unprepared to expect anything from humans other than kindness. Acts as wanton and merciless as these murders are beyond comprehension, and I find that I feel pity for the people who committed them. How small must be their hearts and how closed their minds that they could not recognize the nature of the creatures they were brutalizing, that they could not appreciate them and be enriched by that experience as many of us have.

AJ Gutman

ERRATUM: In IGUANA 15(1): 20–23, Brad Lock stated that he hoped that this breeding season would result in the first fertile eggs of the Guatemalan Beaded Lizard (Heloderma horridum charlesbogerti) produced “in captivity” instead of at Zoo Atlanta. Guatemalan Beaded Lizards have been bred successfully on two occasions at the San Diego Zoo (see IGUANA 13(3): 212–215).

Statement of Purpose

Solicitations

The IRCF encourages contribution of articles, letters to the Editor, news items, and announcements for publication in IGUANA. General articles can deal with any aspect of reptilian biology, including conservation, behavior, ecology, physiology, systematics, or husbandry. Submission of photographs to accompany articles is encouraged. Manuscripts may be submitted via e-mail (send to AJ@IRCF.org). Authors of one page or more of print will receive a free copy of the journal in which their contribution appears, and will receive a PDF file of their article for distribution.

Donations

For any donations, please include your name, address, phone number, and e-mail address.

Advertising Policy

We advertise only non-living products (except feeder insects). For advertising rates and options contact Sandy Binns, Advertising Director, at SB@IRCF.org or 3010 Magnum Drive, San Jose, CA 95135.
