Central Netted Dragons (Ctenophorus nuchalis) from Australia are popular in captivity due to their striking appearance and great temperament. See article on p. 226.

KRISTA MOUGEY

Newly hatched Texas Horned Lizard (Phrynosoma cornutum) on the face of a watch. See article on p. 204.

KENNETH L. KRYSKO

Invasive Knight Anoles (Anolis equestris) should be removed when encountered in the wild. See article on p. 212.

MARK DE SILVA

Grenada Treeboas (Corallus grenadensis) remain abundant on many of the Grenadine Islands despite the fact that virtually all forested portions of the islands were cleared for agriculture during colonial times. This individual is from Mayreau. See article on p. 198.

JOSHUA M. KAPFER

Of the snakes that occur in the upper midwestern United States, Bullsnakes (Pituophis catenifer sayi) are arguably the most impressive in stature and may be rewarding subjects of research. See article on p. 190.

WIKIPEDIA.ORG

Populations of the Caspian Seal (Pusa caspica) have declined by 90% in the last 100 years due to unsustainable hunting and habitat degradation. See "Conservation Alert" on p. 220.
