ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We are now beginning our second year of our e-journal publication. The “General Managers” had no knowledge about such online journals when we started, though we had some experience in cooperative print editing (see New Perspectives on Russian-American Relations (Routledge, 2016) and the series Americans in Revolutionary Russia (Slavica, 2016-).

This journal would not have been possible without the advice, expertise, and experience of staff members of the University of Kansas Libraries. Foremost is Marianne Reed, Digital Initiatives Coordinator who provided consultative and technical support. Her interest and enthusiasm about our project was instrumental in getting us started. Also important for our success is Pam LeRow who is our Production and Layout Specialist, who transferred recently to the library from considerable service in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Word Processing Center, where she was well-known to one of us for her manuscript expertise. Also providing advice from experience is Jon Giullian, Librarian for Slavic and Eurasian Studies, who is the long time Content Online Manager for the e-journal, Folklorica. Many thanks to all of them and the University of Kansas Libraries, which now hosts 31 open access journals, up from 25 when we started. For a list, see <https://journals.ku.edu/>.
