Editors' Remarks

In past years, only a few research-oriented articles submitted to Reptiles & Amphibians (previously IGUANA) were subjected to external review. However, the year-long tribute to Henry Fitch and the new section on introduced species often required expertise beyond that of the editor in charge of a particular article or note. Consequently, external review has become the norm rather than the exception not only for research articles but also for feature articles and notes as well as any submissions to the introduced species section. While we rely heavily on one another and members of the editorial board, several additional individuals have provided reviews of content in the past year. We thank Robert D. Aldridge, Daniel D. Beck, Matthew E. Gifford, Walter E. Meshaka, Jamie K. Reaser, and Gerard van Buurt. In addition, the following editors and members of the editorial board have provided formal reviews during 2010: Arthur C. (Sandy) Echternacht, Robert W. Henderson, John B. Iverson, Gad Perry, Robert Powell, and Thomas Wiewandt.
